Folks:

For several reasons we sailed at Cranberry Lake when, wind wise, it would have made better since to sail at Bowman Bay. The main reason we found ourselves at Cranberry was the on-going search and rescue operation for Bob Wells BritPop. The little yellow boat lost a deck patch in 30 mph winds at the Caper last Sunday and sank like a rock in 12 ft of water. Julian has been working for a week to raise her and was finally successful. Good job Julian.

The light winds made for challenging sailing but the racing was great fun. You could cover the top three with a wash cloth they were so close. Joe is hard to beat in light air and Marc turned in a very consistent performance.

Enjoy
