Folk:

The weather bones foretold that the wind, 4 to 6 mph, on the pier would start out from the south and then clock to the west at about 11:00 am, and as we all know "bones do not lie!". Well they didn't lie. The change took about as long as it takes to set the course to the south and get back to the dock. Oh well, just another excuse to get out on the water.

We raced in about the best lite air conditions you could ask for. A steady 5 mph WNW wind that picked up a bit and backed toward W as the afternoon progressed.

I quote the reaction of a young man when I told him that sailing like this from the top of the pier is like the ultimate video game, he said "This is way better than any video game. This is real." True true.

Enjoy.
