Folks,

Wow! What a difference a few days can make. From Wednesdays cold upper B-Rig conditions to Sundays warm light air A-Rig conditions. We had a great time with the high pressure weather system moving in the winds were from the northwest. It had us racing upwind towards the beach. Several sailors were living on the dangerous side and trying to get every last foot of lift along the beach. Several grounded out on the beach. You know who you are! There were hints of the summer westerlies coming around the corner of the bluff which made wind shift tactics very important both upwind and down. The forecast for Wednesday is continued warm weather with a northwest to west light wind.

See you Wednesday!

Mike Doherty
